

Your evidence. Your direction.

Alex Rao (fictional sample) | Skill Exam - Python - Coding Practice

Assessment-only evaluation | 23 October 2026

Assessment score: 80.15%

Performance band: Excellent. This skill exam does not include an interview. Career guidance is included; contact the team to arrange your call.

Questions: 40 | Answered: 40 | Correct: 32 | Unanswered: 0

Subject performance

Subject	Marks / maximum	Answered	Score
Python subject MCQs	24.00 / 28	28	85.7%
Aptitude	4.00 / 5	5	80.0%
Logical reasoning	4.00 / 5	5	80.0%
Python easy coding case	7.50 / 10	1	75.0%
Python medium coding case	15.00 / 20	1	75.0%

Time and accuracy

Accuracy on answered questions: 80.0%. Unanswered: 0. Practice skipping difficult questions and returning after completing the easier ones.

Relative strengths

Python MCQ fundamentals, aptitude and logical reasoning met 75% in this fictional example.

Top three focus areas

- Python / Generators and iteration
- Python / Exception handling

Build a stronger next attempt.

Suggested practice: 6–8 hours each week; adjust to your schedule.

Week 1 - Rebuild fundamentals

Start with the lowest-scoring subjects and the weak topics listed above. Use reliable course material and document unclear concepts.

Week 2 - Apply what you learn

Complete a small role-related project. Practice edge cases and validate your results with tests or worked examples.

Week 3 - Timed practice

Practice a complete assessment within its published duration. Improve question selection, accuracy and time management. Review unanswered questions separately.

Week 4 - Review progress

Repeat exercises in weak topics, maintain an error log and compare practice results. Discuss your next learning steps during the included career guidance call.

How to interpret this report

Recommendations are rule-based guidance from your recorded answers. This assessment did not evaluate interview communication, employment experience or personality. This assessment record documents participation and the displayed score; it does not certify interview qualification or guarantee employment.